Early map of the roads from London to Marlborough

OGILBY, John.

The Road from London to the City of Bristol.

London, c.1675, second state. Coloured. 330 x 445mm.

£450

The first part of the route from London to Bristol, via Kensington, Hammersmith, Maidenhead, Newbury, Hungerford, ending at Marlborough. Plate 10 from Ogilby's 'Britannia', the first national road-atlas of any country in Western Europe. It was composed of maps of seventy-three major roads and cross-roads, presented as trompe-l'œil scrolls, each with a decorative title cartouche. It was the first English atlas on a uniform scale, at one inch to a mile, and the 'mile' Ogilby used became the national standard, the statute mile of 1,760 yards. Ogilby claimed that 26,600 miles of roads were surveyed in the course of preparing the atlas, on foot using the surveyor's wheel depicted in the cartouche, but only about 7,500 were actually depicted in print. It was only after the 'Britannia' that roads started being shown on county maps.
